ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS OF ENGLAND

HUNTERIAN MUSEUM

Junior Museum Technician

This newly created post offers an excellent opportunity to gain practical experience in a specialised historical medical museum of international repute. The duties will include the care of a unique collection of comparative anatomy and pathology (largely prepared in the 18th century), the conservation of historical surgical instruments, simple constructional work for displays, possibly some photography, and assisting with museum displays and the preparation of catalogues.

The Museum's long tradition demands a very high standard of presentation. Applicants must have a keen interest in natural history and be able to show evidence of artistic ability and manual dexterity.

The successful applicant will be given appropriate training in all the necessary skills and will be encouraged to study for the Museums Association Certificate in Medical Museum Technology.

Further details may be obtained from the Curator, (01 405 3474).

Salary: on a scale rising to £3,369 (under review) according to age and experience.

Applications to the Personnel Officer, Royal College of Surgeons, Lincolns Inn Fields, London, WC2A 3PN.
